

Illalangi

EXTRA TASTY FACT:

Illalangi was the first producer in SA to package olive oil into casks—ensuring no oxidation and premium quality until the last drop.

WHO ARE WE?

Illalangi is a family owned and run, grower, producer and providore based in South Australia's Riverland. The smiles behind these delectable goodies are Keryn and John Gorman, who established Illalangi retail store in 2010.

WHY YOU'LL LOVE OUR PRODUCE

Through travelling the world and then experimenting with local ingredients, Keryn and John have developed an iconic signature range of single estate, small batch wines and extra virgin olive oil, and an ever-expanding unique range of gourmet products featuring local fresh produce and native ingredients. Their extra virgin olive oil is set above the rest after being one of the first in SA to store in casks, providing premium storage for what is essentially "just olive juice", so you will enjoy its health benefits and amazing fresh taste until the last drop.

Their commitment to quality shows, with the award-winning Caramelised Wattleseed Balsamic, which took home a silver medal at the Sydney Fine Food Show in 2010. Enjoy the saltbush blend of their native dukkah, with Riverland almonds and pistachios, sunflower kernels, sesame seeds and pine nuts blended with their signature native herbs and spices.

The Illalangi wines are an in-demand scarcity, showing off the new world varietals emerging into the SA wine scene.

The name 'Illalangi' comes from the Aboriginal word meaning "home on hill", incredibly fitting for this hidden gem in Waikerie.

Their label also draws inspiration from the Aboriginal myth of the Rainbow Serpent, a powerful symbol that holds control over life's most precious resource, water, and is the lifeblood to the semi-arid region of the Riverland.

The Gorman's came into business out of passion for the region. This entrepreneurial family fell in love with the region and its amazing clean green produce, made possible by its Mediterranean climate, and have pursued it as their own success story.
